SUMMARY OF NEW CONCLUSIONS OF PHD THESIS

Title: Developing adaptability skills on the vocation through vocational practice and internship for technical college students

Speciality: Theory and Method of Teaching the Industrial Technique Subject

Classification: 62.14.01.11

PhD student: Nguyen Thanh Long

Supervisor: Prof. Dr. Nguyen Van Ho

Institutional: Hanoi National Univesity of Education

New conclusions

1. Theoretical and practical framework of adaptability skills on the vocation is the basis for proposing teaching methods to develop adaptability skills on the vocation through practice, vocational internship for technical college students.

2. Structure of adaptability skills of technical students consists of two components: career skills; specialized skills.

3. Make a set of criteria for assessing specific skills as a basis for surveying and evaluating the current status of developing adaptability skills.

4. Contents of developing vocational skills of technical college students in practical teaching and apprenticeship.

5. Propose three measures to develop adaptability skills on the vocation for technical college students: 1 / Instruct students to study, practice reasoning awareness of adaptability skills, adaptability skills on the vocation in technical college; 2 / Guide student practice some adaptability skills on the vocation through vocational practice and internship; 3 / Develop the way to design of practice lesson, vocational internship in the direction of developing adaptability skills on the vocation.

6. The test results demonstrate the feasibility and effectiveness of adaptability skills on the vocation through vocational practice and internship for students of in technical college of welding and engineering.

Supervisor	PhD student
Prof. Dr. Nguyen Van Ho	Nguyen Thanh Long